I got it from Brian. The OACP letter and Canadian Police Association (all the police unions) letter will be in hand tomorrow morning.

The others were actually hoping to publish their letters in a coordinated way with the CACP so that they wouldn't look like they were chasing the issue.

I see the CACP letter has been published on Twitter.

I will let you know if the OACP and CPA position is affected

Thank you

And the CACP has not published the letter on their Twitter account. They were in agreement in being part of a coordinated communication strategy.

I guess they failed to take into account other people's strategy

I presume you don't want to post about this until they do?
